“Prophets and Professors of the Bible at the Crossroads: Eco-Criticism, Pandemics, and Pedagogy Reimagined”

Presider: Matthew Goff, Florida State University
Zoom Moderator: Arya Adityan (aadityan@fsu.edu)

Prof. Dube draws on scholarship and teaching on the Bible to inform and mobilize scholars, students, and the public to think and act critically in the face of the linked challenges of global warming and international public health threats. With the erosion of ecosystems and the intrusion of populations into previously uninhabited areas, new pandemics are emerging while coastal and insular populations find themselves under threat by rising sea levels. Students and scholars of religion across the globe find themselves touched by both dynamics, but we are not without the resources to respond. Our teaching of Biblical Studies can play a key role in turning these tides by helping us to reimagine our roles in doing so.

“Slavery in the Heart of Freedom:
Race, Romance, and Religion
through the Lens of BDSM”

Presider: Joseph Hellweg, Florida State University
Zoom Moderator: Beth Ann Williams (bwilliams10@fsu.edu)

The Enlightenment’s insistence on the freedom, individual rights, equality before the law, and the bodily integrity of the citizen co-occurred with the height of the Atlantic slave trade, with its grotesque torture of the Black body. Yet the Enlightenment’s promises were no panacea, not even for the new white citizen. Unmoored from hereditary station and its networks of guaranteed esteem, mutual assistance, and transcendent meaning, the citizen seeks relief from the relentless competition for personal worth in religion, romance, and their anachronistic symbols of conquest, domination, and surrender.

This lecture focuses on white US American BDSM, the Afro-Atlantic religions, and Trumpism as parallel, but ethically divergent, forms of nostalgia for compulsory hierarchy and solidarity in an age of compulsory self-sufficiency and competition. BDSM is a religion that, like other religions, rests on nostalgia for archaic and violently enforced forms of hierarchy and offers the option of release from the under-recognized emotional burdens of freedom and equality. For its part, Trumpism demonstrates the ambivalence of the middle rank—whites and wannabe-whites—under conditions of status precarity. Their movement is both a slave-like rebellion against their class superiors and the worship of a violent Messiah who would return them to a time free of Black and brown competition.
